

This game follows a man named chico. He has lived in his square little box all his life, surrounded by mountains with a little pond. He doesn't even know how he got there, he has no parents (that he knows of) and no purpose. He lives in his house and fishes in his watering hole every day. He never dares to see what is beyond on the other side of the mountains. His life is not a bad one, but something is missing.

Until one day he hears Ima Dawg by Kevin Gates. It immediately changes his whole worldview. He now only desires to keep the money flipping, it's all he knows. He's been in and out of prison for a while he knows. He grew up in the ghetto, thuggin' in the game. After hearing this divine melody a coin appears in front of his house. He is enamored. He must keep the money flipping at all costs. He ventures out for more coins but cannot find them. He must do the unthinkable, go beyond the mountains.

He packs his bag and he goes, leaving behind the only life he has ever known based off of a song with about 35 seconds of good music from an artist he had never heard before. He walks past the mountains and looks over the horizon, the view is better than he ever could have dreamed of. He sees more coins and begins collecting them. As he is going he feels himself becoming more and more untamed. He has to have more. He finally reaches the last coin and reaches full enlightenment. He stands there and says the word "untamed" 30 times as Kevin Gates would want.
